MINERS' HEAD IS
PHYSICAL WRECKRecent Long Drawn Out
Strike Hard on Lewis,
According to Report.

Reports indicate that the long drawn out strike of the union soft coal fields has affected the health of John F. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. To what extent has not been learned. In an address in connection with the settlement in the hard coal fields Mr. Lewis is quoted as follows: "I have been out of the firing line and I have been working for weeks and months. I have given my best and have no apologies to make. I am a physical wreck. I have suffered as John Mitchell and John White did. I know now why after a few years' service they were forced to retire."

Mr. Lewis reviewed the struggle of bituminous and anthracite miners. He told with what effort the bituminous men had won their fight and then switched to the anthracite struggle, declaring that he had not given up the hope of the check-out on an eight-hour day, but the proposal before the convention was the very best the miners could hope to get, he said.

Miners Financing.
Saward's Journal, New York City, comments as follows on the financing of the miners' strike: "It became known this week that a loan of $200,000 on personal notes of John F. Lewis and other officials of the United Mine Workers, without collateral security, was made to the union last July by the Harriman National Bank of New York. It was made at a time when the union's funds were running low and there was urgent need of money with which to continue the strike. Was this the basis for Governor Miller's statement that the big strikes were financed by Wall street? Many a great tale has been founded upon a more inadequate basis."

The Public Pays.
Commenting upon the cost of the coal strikes Secretary of Commerce Hoover is quoted as follows: "There is one fundamental lesson that the public should absorb from the coal situation, and this lesson can be derived without discussion of the rights and wrongs of the demands of either mine workers or mine operators, or the incidents of negotiation in their settlement. That is, a four-month suspension of production in the coal industry, while primarily a conflict between employer and employee, brings the public in as the largest sufferer."

"The public is the victim of infinite loss; unemployment extends from it not only to the workers in the industry but to hundreds of thousands outside of it; great damage is done to commerce and industry; public health is jeopardized and a vast wave of crime and defiance of the law has ensued."

"Yet the public has no voice in the negotiations and cannot express itself as to the right or wrong of the matter. The demands of either side may be just as unjust, but the largest sufferer concerned has no representation in the discussion." He offers no constructive suggestion, however, nor does he indicate what the public can do about it if the miners again insist on settling the next strike to suit themselves.

Strike Not Settled.
H. Franking Thomas, head of a large Cardiff exporing house, who was in the United States recently is quoted as follows on the recent American miners' victory:

"As an outsider, one hesitates to offer a criticism, but it appears to me that the settlement arrived at in the American bituminous strike is a very bad one. The operators appear to have given way to the men in order to snatch an immediate profit, and it is almost certain that this will tend to further trouble in the near future, as the coal trade of the world is not in a position to allow the payment of such high wages as have been granted to the American miners."

"As a result of our settlement, we have been through a bad time, both owners and miners, but we now have peace and the trade is on a sound financial basis. I think it highly probable that before long the coal trade of the world will have to be gone through."

MURIEL M'CORMICK

BECOMES MODISTE

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Muriel McCormick has moved out of what she calls the "spooky family mansion" on Chicago's "Gold Coast."

"She has set up in business as a modiste, in a modest establishment on a quiet North Side street, and not under her own name either, but as 'Nowanna Micor' for it's to have people forget that she's one of the millionaires McCormicks" that she wants more than anything in the world.

She will live in an unpretentious flat, studying vocal music when at liberty from her work as a modiste.

Her grandfather is John D. Rockefeller. Her father, recently divorced, married Ganna Walska, a little while ago. Of her sister's reported engagement to Max Oser, Swiss riding master, countless columns have been printed. Her own whole life, she complains has been an artificial one.

They are usually very constant to their physicians, often changing their aches, but not their doctors.

Virgo people are usually of middle or tallish stature, with round faces, musical voices well formed bodies and elegant manners. True companionship may be found among those born under Sagittarius, Libra or under their own sign, Virgo.
